I was very often called upon to attend on Guests and other distinguished visitors in whom Government interested themselves. In doing the work, I keenly felt the need of a quick means of motion and went in for a motor car. The number of guests and visitors of rank have been on the increase, and the Chief Secretary is aware how the motor conveyance has distinctly made for better attendance on the guests and has at the same time enabled me to overcome the prejudice which the work would otherwise have caused to my work in office. I was able to attend on guests and devote the usual attention to my office work also. The Chief Secretary also knows that the guests have all spoken uniformly well of my attendance.

While the possession of a motor car has contributed to this result, it has been pressing hard on my slender means. The car costs me about Rs 100 on an average every month. Though it is almost in the nature of a - necessity for the proper discharge of my duties, it acts in effect as a luxury on my means.

Pressed by sheer necessity, I have ventured to bring these facts to the Chief Secretary's notice for kind grant of such relief as he might be pleased to consider necessary, in the shape of a monthly conveyance allowance.

I had not represented so long, but as I find it an impossibility to carry on, I have made bold to do so now.
